Home automation app, Remoty app: the whole house in your hands
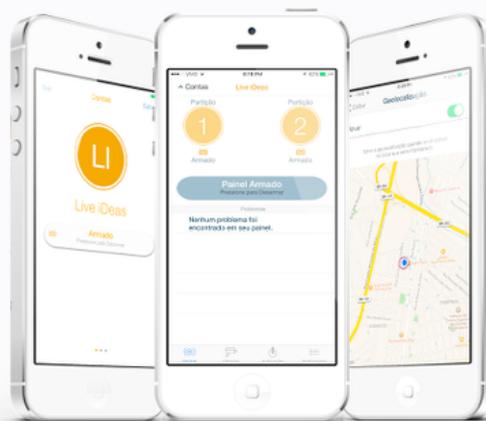

One of the most important fairs in the security sector in Latin America, the 20th EXPOSEC | International Security Fair will be held from May 23 to 25, 2017, at São Paulo Expo, in São Paulo, bringing together the main players of the industry in a single event.

In its 1st participation in the fair, REMOTY will present the web platform and other applications for smartphone. The highlight is Remoty app, an integrated electronic security platform that allows users to stay connected to what's happening at home, with real-time alerts, and remotely control their security system through applications.

Using the Remoty app you can monitor and control your entire home automation on your smartphone or tablet: remotely turn the alarm on or off; Monitor live security cameras; Schedule lighting or adjust a thermostat and receive alert notifications on your mobile device in real time. Smart protection provides real-time images of what's happening.

The system can also be integrated with that of other neighbors, creating an alert network that follows pre-established protocols. You can also control lighting even if the room is empty and install sensors that alert you to certain custom activities such as opening the back door or garage.

Remoty app offers video service for live broadcasts from computers, tablets or smartphones. The video service supports both internal and external cameras, which include HD resolution (720p), as well as infrared and night vision capabilities.

The CEO of the company, Rafael Gonçalves, always saw EXPOSEC as a watershed, because during the fair, potential customers' booths all over Brazil circulate. In addition, leading players in the security market use EXPOSEC as a showcase for their products. "To be present at EXPOSEC is putting REMOTY at the same level of brands already established in the national market," says the executive.

In this edition, the event, organized by Cipa Fiera Milano, in partnership with the Brazilian Association of Electronic Security Systems Companies (ABESE) will receive approximately 800 exhibiting brands and an estimated 42,000 visitors among electronic, private, personal, property and business security professionals.
